HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES 151st GENERAL ASSEMBLY

HOUSE BILL NO. 342

AN ACT TO AMEND TITLE 11 OF THE DELAWARE CODE RELATING TO TREATMENT OF PREGNANT AND POST-PARTUM PRISONERS.

1 WHEREAS, Delaware law currently limits the circumstances in which a pregnant person may be restrained and 2 completely prohibits the use of restraints during labor or delivery; and 3 WHEREAS, the Women's Prison Association reports there is no record of escape from a woman who was not 4 restrained during labor; and 5 WHEREAS, it is cruel and inhumane to add to the discomfort of women already suffering from pregnancy 6 symptoms by shackling or restraining their limbs; and 7 WHEREAS, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists affirms that shackling a pregnant inmate 8 increases the risk of falling, impairs evaluations for serious pregnancy-associated conditions, causes pain and skin damage; 9 and further endangers the inmate when they are at increased risk of preeclampsia; and 10 WHEREAS, using restraints on a person who has recently given birth may negatively impact bonding between mother and child, as well as exacerbate pregnancy-related mental health conditions such as depression and post-traumatic 11 12 stress disorder; and 13 WHEREAS, the State must do more to protect and enhance the dignity, health, safety, and wellbeing of all 14 pregnant and postpartum persons in its correctional system. 15 NOW, THEREFORE: 16 BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF DELAWARE: 17 Section 1. The General Assembly hereby finds that the physical restraint of persons in custody during pregnancy, labor, a	ınd recovery presents serious risks to the health and well-being of mother and baby. In most circumstances, the use of restrain	nts
is unnecessary and dangerous. restraining a pregnant woman can pose undue health risks to the woman and her unbo	эrn fetus. Freedom from physical restraints is especially critical during labor, delivery, and postpartum recovery after delivery	ry.
Women often need to move around during labor and recovery, including moving their legs as part of the birthing proce	SS.
Restraints on a pregnant woman can interfere with the medical staff's ability to appropriately assist in childbirth or	-to conduct sudden emergency procedures. Shackling is unnecessary and dangerous to a woman's well-being.

SYNOPSIS

Delaware law already prohibits the use of restraints on women who are giving birth or in labor except in limited circumstances. This Act expands that protection to include women in the second or third trimester of pregnancy and those in the 13-week immediate post-partum period. Wrist restraints fastened in front of the body may be used during transport except during labor or delivery or while being transported with a newborn. Wrist, leg, and waist restraints may also be used in extraordinary circumstances, but a licensed medical professional must be notified as soon as practicable when waist or leg restraints are applied and examine the prisoner within 10 minutes of the notification. Leg and waist restraints are prohibited for prisoners in labor and delivery.

The Act also requires that a pregnant or post-partum woman who is required to squat or cough during a strip search be provided accommodations to avoid falls and prohibits vaginal exams except those performed by a medical professional.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists states that shackling a pregnant inmate increases the risk of falling, impairs evaluations for serious pregnancy-associated conditions, causes pain and skin damage, and further endangers inmates at increased risk of preeclampsia. The use of restraints in the post-partum period creates additional risks to physical and mental health.
