21 become public record, but they will not become automatically affiliated with that party.

22 The voting procedure at any primary election shall be the same as at any general election, except that the officers
23 shall first determine from the voter's original permanent registration record whether the voter's party affiliation is the same 24 as the party holding the primary election, and, if they are not the same, the voter shall not be permitted to vote in the 25 primary election.

SYNOPSIS

This Act allows Delaware voters who are not affiliated with a political party to vote in a political party's primary election.

Currently there are approximately 170,000 registered Delaware voters who are not affiliated with a political party. Members of a political party are not allowed to crossover and vote in another political party's primary election.
